Professor Pamela Samuelson is a Director of the Berkeley Center for Law & Technology, and advisor to the Samuelson High Technology Law & Public Policy Clinic at Boalt Hall. She is also an Honorary Professor at the University of Amsterdam. She teaches courses on intellectual property, cyberlaw and information policy. She has written and spoken extensively about the challenges that new information technologies pose for traditional legal regimes, especially for intellectual property law. Her most recent major article was “The Law and Economics of Reverse Engineering,” co-authored with Suzanne Scotchmer, published in the Yale Law Journal in 2002. From 1997 to 2002, she was a Fellow of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation. She is a member of the Boards of Directors of the Electronic Frontier Foundation, the Open Source Application Foundation, and Public Knowledge.

Professor Samuelson was awarded a B.A. in History in 1971 and an M.A. in Political Science in 1972 from the University of Hawai‘i. After receiving a J.D. from Yale Law School in 1976, she practiced litigation with Willkie Farr & Gallagher. Her first teaching position was as a Visiting Assistant Professor at the University of Hawai‘i Law School in 1980. From 1981 to 1996 she was a member of the University of Pittsburgh Law School Faculty, from which she visited at Columbia, Cornell, and Emory Law Schools. She has been a member of the Berkeley faculty since 1996. She is proud to have been named a Distinguished Alumna of the University of Hawai‘i in 2000.

The Gifford Foundation is a charitable organization established by Jack Gifford, the Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer of Maxim Integrated Products, Inc., in Sunnyvale, California. Gifford was named CEO of the Year in 2001 by Electronic Business Magazine. His company is a leading international supplier of quality analog and mixed-signal products for applications that require real world signal processing.

The William S. Richardson School of Law Distinguished Lectureship in Real Property was established in 2002 by The Gifford Foundation to honor Benjamin A. Kudo Professor of Law David L. Callies and prominent local attorney Jerry M. Hiatt '77 for their superior work in the field of real property.
