Founded in 1913, the American Judicature Society is an independent, non-partisan, membership organization working nationally to protect the integrity of the American justice system. AJS’s diverse and broadly based membership - including judges, lawyers, and members of the public - promotes fair and impartial courts through research, publications, education, and advocacy for judicial reform. The work of AJS focuses on judicial ethics, judicial selection, access to justice, criminal justice reform, and the jury system. Established in 1998, Hawaii is the first AJS state chapter in the nation.
