The Crisis in Hong Kong: What’s at Stake?

An Asia Law Talk

After three months of mass protests, Hong Kong is in a state of crisis. Demonstrations against a controversial proposal to allow extradition to Mainland China have escalated into a much broader public protest against Beijing’s increased interference in the “high degree of autonomy” that was promised when Hong Kong transitioned from a British Colony to a Special Administrative Region of China. Academics who have lived and worked in Hong Kong will analyze the underlying causes of the unrest and the implications for “One Country, Two Systems” as a form of regional autonomy.

When: Wednesday September 18th
12:00 to 1:30pm

Where: WSRSL Davis Levin Livingston Moot Courtroom, 2515 Dole Street
Lunch will be served to participants who RSVP using this form.

Moderator
Professor Cathryn Clayton, Chair of the Asian Studies Program, University of Hawai‘i at Mānoa

Panelist
Professor Carole Petersen, “Autonomy as a Form of Internal Self-Determination? Competing Views of the Sino-British Joint Declaration”

Panelist
Professor Alison Conner, “The Extradition Bill and China’s Criminal Justice System”

Panelist
Professor Charles Booth, “Extradition, the Business Community, and the Flow of Capital”

Co-Sponsors: Center for Chinese Studies; Asian Studies Program; Spark M. Matsunaga Institute for Peace and Conflict Resolution; Institute of Asian-Pacific Business Law (IAPBL).