An Unjust Burden:
The Disparate Impact of the Criminal Justice System on Native Hawaiians and other Pacific Islanders

Ken Lawson is the Co-Director of the Hawai’i Innocence Project (HIP) at the William S. Richardson School of Law, where he teaches Criminal Procedure, Criminal Law, Professional Responsibility, Evidence, and Hawai’i Innocence Project. Founded in 1999, HIP is the Law School’s student-staffed, attorney-supervised law clinic that fights for the freedom of those who have been wrongfully convicted in Hawai’i’s criminal justice system.

Tyler Gomes is the Partnerships Manager for Hawai’i at Elemental Excelerator. He was previously a felony trial attorney at the Office of the Public Defender O’ahu Office, where he argued at all levels, from parole hearings to cases before the District, Circuit, and Hawai’i Supreme Court. Tyler graduated from the William S. Richardson School of Law in 2012 with a Certificate in Native Hawaiian Law.

Kamaile Maldonado is a Public Policy Advocate at the Office of Hawaiian Affairs (OHA), where she advocates for systemic law and policy changes for Native Hawaiians in the criminal justice system. She serves as OHA’s designee on the State of Hawai’i Corrections Population Management Commission.

Moderated by Susan K. Serrano, Associate Director of Ka Huli Ao