Study Environmental Law in Hawai‘i
Summer 2015

The University of Hawai‘i Law School offers law students a unique opportunity to learn about cutting-edge environmental law issues and earn up to 6 law school credits.

Join us for two keystone courses and remarkable field trips. Learn inside and outside the classroom how the law protects natural resources in one of the world’s most ecologically diverse regions. Field trips include marine protected areas, cultural sites, native species habitat, and spectacular shorelines.

Administrative Law
Instructor: Andrew Mergen, U.S. Department of Justice-D.C. environmental appellate division attorney

Domestic Ocean Law & Policy
Instructor: Denise Antolini, Former Director of the UH Environmental Law Program, Associate Dean of UH Law School
