Wine and Cheese

Bring Your RA

Does your RA know where to find research material for your next law review article, book, or book chapter? Bring Your RA to the Law Library’s “Wine and Cheese” event.

All Richardson first year students take Legal Research in the Fall semester. This course provides each student with a basic foundation in the most important skills one needs to be a lawyer. The course does not prepare students to research topics at the depth most law professors require for their own scholarship. But, it’s all online, right? RAs are “digital natives,” right?

Jerry Dupont, former Dean and Library Director of the UH Mānoa Law School, stated in a May 2013 ABA Journal article, “‘When people say everything’s online they’re woefully uninformed.’ Dupont, founder of the Law Library Microform Consortium (LLMC), a nonprofit law library cooperative, estimates that of the 2 million unique volumes contained in America’s law libraries, only about 15 percent are available in digital form. That figure includes access via proprietary, commercial services like Westlaw and LexisNexis."
