HOT TOPICS AT THE 2015 LEGISLATURE:
What’s In Store For Native Hawaiians?

On January 21, 2015, the 28th Hawai‘i State Legislature convened. In a session that will run through early May, thousands of bills will be introduced and embark on a long process with the potential to become law. Each session, advocates for and opponents of Kānaka Maoli (Native Hawaiians) converge on the state capitol to be a part of this process. Come to learn from a State House Representative and Public Policy Advocate about both the legislative process and how you can engage. They will also share their insider perspectives on major issues impacting the Kānaka Maoli community this session.

Representative Kaniela Ing serves the 11th House District of South Maui: Kihei, Wailea, and Makena. He chairs the House Committee on Ocean, Marine Resources, and Hawaiian Affairs and serves on other committees with the kuleana of reviewing bills that directly impact the Kānaka Maoli community and the resources upon which our culture depends. At 24, Representative Ing is the youngest member of the State Legislature and, thus, looks intently to Hawai‘i’s future in his policy making. He is a proud product of the Kamehameha Schools Maui, the University of Hawai‘i at Mānoa, and American University in Washington DC.

Jocelyn Doane is the Senior Public Policy Advocate at the Office of Hawaiian Affairs (“OHA”) where she helps to lead OHA’s legislative team. In this capacity, she reviews, tracks, and testifies on nearly one thousand bills each legislative session. She also briefs OHA’s Board of Trustees on its legislative package and other measures of interest to the Maoli community. Ms. Doane is a proud graduate of Hawai‘i’s public school system. In 2007, she was one of the first three recipients of the William S. Richardson School of Law’s Pacific Asian Legal Studies certificate with a specialization in Native Hawaiian Law.
